

SUMAYA ELKASHIF – JOHNS HOPKINS SCHOOL OF ADVANCED INTERNATIONAL STUDIES EUROPE

I have not heard much about Sudan here so I wanted to highlight the importance of not forgetting our Sudanese, and Congolese, brothers and sisters. April 15th, 2024 marked one year since the atrocious re-start of war in Sudan resulting in over 8 million displaced peoples, IDPs and refugees, ethnically targeted people in Darfur West Sudan, and thousands of women and children victims of sexual violence. In this global discussion, we must remember to promote policies that support refugee integration and facilitate better pathways to migration and protection of vulnerable peoples in conflict situations. From Palestine to Sudan to Congo to Haiti, let us form policies both at home and abroad, that facilitate equity and inclusion for people on the move and the most vulnerable. If the European Union created temporary protection for ukrainians within days of the start of the Russia-Ukraine War, then they, and we, are entirely capable our treating Black and brown peoples better. Reparations also means respect for human rights and begins with the humanization of the victims of enslavement, colonization, and war.
